Activity 3: Ritz-Carlton: Promise-to-Proof Service Blueprint

Course C233

Objective

Apply organisation branding strategy to service standards and touchpoints

Documented real-event basis

Ritz-Carlton publicly presents its Gold Standards—including its credo, motto and service values—as the foundation of its service culture.

Scenario

A Singapore premium eldercare concierge has a warm visual identity but inconsistent enquiry, onboarding and family-update experiences. It wants standards that feel personal rather than scripted.

Primary source

Training assumptions

• The eldercare concierge, personas and operational data are fictional and are not connected to Ritz-Carlton.

• Families value dignity, clarity, continuity and rapid escalation when care needs change.

• The organisation has 12 advisors across phone, WhatsApp and in-person channels.

• Privacy, safeguarding and clinical escalation are non-negotiable guardrails.

Questions

1. What strategic promise should the concierge make, and to whom?

2. Which service principles and observable standards would make the promise real?

3. Where should delivery be standardised, and where should employees exercise judgement?

4. What physical or digital evidence would reassure families before and during service?

Expected output

Promise-to-proof architecture and service blueprint for four moments that matter

Acceptance test

The blueprint traces one promise through principles, observable standards, backstage enablers, tangible cues and measures, with explicit privacy and safeguarding guardrails.
